

The Jealousy of Womankind

It seems hard to believe, but recently a lady in a nearby town refused to tell a friend the secret of the success of a certain delicious cake. She was so jealous of her reputation as a cook that she kept the knowledge of

New Story About Coming Champion.

Kirkwoods Will Play South Ends Saturday.

Have Declared Against Foot Ball—Local Sporting News.

Long before the pugilistic insect played sonatas in the bonnet of Gus Ruhlin, another insect, the base ball bug, infested the headgear of the husky Buckeye, says Joe Campbell of Washington. Three years ago Gus turned in Washington with his manager, Billy Madden. They had just returned from New Orleans, where Gus had sealed the frame of that much-boomed Australian, Tom Ryan, and incidentally damaged Tut's visage and framework in 10 rounds, with Ruhlin as the pace-maker all the way. Ruhlin was a guest of his uncle, Charlie Goff, an old-fashioned Jackson Democrat, Buckeye to the marrow, and an employee in the capital at the government land office.

I made Gus quite at home and introduced him to Tom Brown and the Washington players, who were then in the midst of their preliminary practice at National Park. Tom delved in to Duke Farrell's toilet and brought forth the Duke's regalia, his road uniform, and Gus squeezed his 200 pounds within the Duke's flannels. For three or four days he practiced with the local team, pitching being his specialty. Ruhlin displayed no little promise in the art of handling 'em over the platter. So enthusiastic was Brown over Gus' clever twirling that he actually offered to place him under contract for that season. Ruhlin, however, observed nothing but visions of milk, honey, the easy street in the game of passage at arms. He certainly was a man of ambition, an ambition that will bear golden fruit if so be it he manages to conquer the present holder of the heavy-weight champion laurel, Jeffries.

"This pitching game and myself," said Gus, "have been on hand-shaking acquaintance for 10 years off and on. When I worked in the machine shops and paper mills at Akron I picked up pitching, and twirled many a game for a local picked nine. I always had speed to burn and pretty fair control of the ball, though control didn't cut much of a figure, as the hitters who bumped against my delivery shut their eyes and swung regardless, nibbling at the down-shoots. This down-swing of the ball or the drop as they call it, was my pet stunt, and I remember one game in which I had the hitters looking like an aggregation of electric fan wheels. Every other ball I served was a down-shoot, and they felt blindly for it with their bats. I struck out 20 that day. One of the managers of the Ohio State League, Charlie Morton, came over to Akron, witnessed my next performance and offered me $150 per month to sign with his team. I preferred a steady job at my trade, however, and stuck to it till Bill Madden came along and enticed me into the boxing game. For several winters I played center rush with an Akron football team, and boxed in exhibition bouts at our gymnasium. When I was in Frisco finishing up my training for the bout with Jeffries, I pitched three games for a local picked nine. I had lost none of my speed, and my pet curve, the down-shoot, was still a trick that I palmed off, as I had full control of it, and won two of the three games. If Jeffries had happened to pulverize my championship ambitions in that fight I might have signed with one of the teams in the California League. But I stood off the boiler maker in 20 rounds, and hope to go him one better by getting the decision the next time we meet. I am not stuck on making trouble with my nauties for a living, but there is money in the game for a first-class heavy-weight, and if, after trying myself out for a year or so, I find that I cannot pull myself out of 'dub' or 'lunked-up' class for boxers, I may be open to offers to pitch ball."

Ruhlin certainly showed great promise as a pitcher. He used a speedy drop curve and an outshoot, starting his drop at a point above his shoulder and describing a half circle, this half-arm swing being a realistic reminder of the delivery of Wm. Wells, of the Bean Eaters. Ruhlin's lofty range—he spans 6 feet 2 inches—would have proved to his advantage, as his very awkwardness balked the batsman. Gus, however, will never be forced to forsake his new love—that of face and body spilling—for the old love, baseball. If his victory over the pugilistic ladder of late be a criterion.

NO FOOT BALL GAME.

From present indications, it looks as if there would be no more athletic contests between the Elks and Kirkwood organizations.

The recent series of base ball games has created a widening between the clubs that will not soon be bridged over. A prominent member of the B. P. O. E. stated Thursday that the Elks were through with the Kirkwoods. There will be no foot ball game be-

Women who suffer from inflammation, ulceration, female weakness, or nervous diseases caused by disease of the womanly organs will find a complete cure by the use of "Favorite Prescription."

"Several years ago I suffered severely from female weakness, proflaps, and menorrhagia, and used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with splendid effect," writes Fannie Scholten, of Washington, Iowa. "Glad I have not needed it for a few years past, but if I should have any return of the old trouble would surely try 'Favorite Prescription.' I have recommended it to a number of my friends, and if they are not benefited by it I will pay for the medicine. In every case they have spoken in praise of it."

A VISIT TO LONG LAKE PARK

A few days ago we had the pleasure of visiting Long Lake Park, going by the new steamer Commodore, operated by the new competent crew. We made the trip from lock 1 in 20 minutes. The engineer claims they will be able to shorten the time to 15 minutes after a few more trials. It was a very satisfactory ride, free from ruts and bumps. The water was cool and shady, having a continuous breeze. Situated 12 feet above the lake, and higher than the surrounding country, it affords a magnificent land and water view. The hotel is having a number of summer boarders, enjoying the excellent and home-like service, having the satisfaction of eating the blue gill fish landed by their own crews. Such a beach for bathing is not surpassed in fresh water bathing.
